Good afternoon,

Here are a few things we wanted you to know about:

Installation of Indigenous Artwork at Canadian Port of Entry

Installation of the second public art commission at the Gordie Howe International Bridge project is underway. Titled Aazhoge, the 3-metre/10-foot-high free-standing sculpture is a contemporary reflection of the culture and traditions of Indigenous Peoples in Canada, with emphasis on local Anishinaabe First Nations. Aazhoge is the Anishinaabe word for bridge and can also mean crossing over or seeing other planes of existence.

Created by renowned Anishinaabe artist, Michael Belmore, the artwork is prominently located within the Canadian Port of Entry, visible to travellers as they enter and exit Canada. Read more about the installation and design.

Building Road and Pedestrian Bridges over I-75

The Gordie Howe International Bridge project requires significant construction activity, including the demolition and removal of existing infrastructure and reconstruction of select roadways and bridges over the I-75 in Detroit. Four road bridges were demolished and rebuilt as part of this work and five pedestrian bridges are currently being reconstructed. Learn more from Isabel Fernandez in this video.
